SUMMER 2024 SOUTH WALES

COLLECTIVE LEARNING

A Welsh company providing quality CPD for Welsh Schools

LIVE ONLINE: Leading an Area of Learning and Experience (Afternoon 1pm - 3.30pm)

Huw Duggan

Many teachers are confused about how to Lead an Area of Learning and Experience. This half-day zoom course will explore the importance of the role within the new curriculum and how to get this into perspective; what effective curriculum design, provision and medium-term planning may look in and across AoLEs; how to establish assessment and progression across the AoLE; how to effectively lead and manage an AoLE, including how to monitor, evaluate and action plan for excellent provision. There will be time for AoLE leads to have input, discussion, and share their concerns. As part of the session, delegates will receive a copy of the Leading your AoLE booklet worth £75 available in Welsh and English.

The Course Objectives include:

- Understanding what an effective AoLE leader would look like and how to fulfil the role meaningfully to improve pedagogy, assessment, curriculum, and experiences in their AoLE.
- Consider what practical assessment and progression look like across their AoLE and how to embed evaluation so that it becomes indistinguishable from learning.
- How to effectively audit, monitor and evaluate their AoLE.
- To undertake personal reflection, consider the quality of their leadership style and identify how to improve this.
- How to action-plan and secure effective change.
- A toolkit of strategies, audits, and templates to help delegates lead effective staff meetings and collaboratively facilitate school improvement.

Date: Thurs 2nd May 2024

Venue: ONLINE meeting 1pm - 3.30pm

Audience: AoLE Leads

Cost: £100 +VAT (Please give an email address for the attendee when booking)

Introducing the Oracy Map: A Tool to Build Your Whole School Oracy Policy
(Morning 9.00 am - 12 noon)
Steph Vaughan

A half-day online course to build your own oracy policy. Pupils learning to talk and talking to learn. Effective classroom talk energises learning. We know that pupils who can talk together are productive, enthusiastic, focused and engaged learners.

This online course introduces you to The Oracy Map, a tool to help you to create your own bespoke whole school oracy policy.

The Oracy Map helps your school to:

- Choose protocols that will underpin your oracy strategy
- Select activities to use in pair, group and class discussion
- Plan how to develop speaking and listening across and between the Progression Steps
- Teach pupils to make formal presentations

An extensive pack of resources is included with The Oracy Map planning tool.

As talk fuels learning, make oracy a priority with The Oracy Map.

LIVE ONLINE: Assessment IN Learning Strategies \(Afternoon 1pm - 3.30pm\)

Huw Duggan

Many schools need help to see what practical assessment looks like in the CfW. After creating Assessment IN Learning with Gareth Coombes, this program aims to take these concepts deeper. It looks at what effective research suggests teachers should be doing, what this should look like in the classroom and what strategies work. As part of the programme, we will examine how teachers can use their planning effectively to plan for, and demonstrate progress, in a lesson and over time.

The Course Objectives include:

- What is Assessment IN Learning
- What are Inspection agencies looking to see regarding effective assessment IN Learning?
- What strategies work best in the classroom to promote Assessment "IN" Learning?
- Which strategies will work for you in your context?
- How can you build your brand for assessment IN Learning across the school?

Proven Ways to Enhance the Teaching of Reading
(Morning 9.00am to 12pm)
Stephanie Vaughan

Action Planning to Drive Improved Reading Lessons

A half-day online course to raise reading standards. Research tells us a lot about what works in a reading classroom and signposts whole school initiatives that definitely raise standards.

This online course helps teachers to consider what skills need to be developed to support novice readers to become fluent and independent readers.

It shows schools how to:

- Prevent disfluency and help pupils to interpret and perform a text
- Support pupils to build their vocabulary banks so that they become more proficient readers
- Help pupils to make inferences by ensuring that they understand how texts work
- Incorporate close reading activities for fiction and non-fiction texts to improve comprehension
- Teach pupils to track a text and use visual representations of text to make meaning.
- Build the reading skills that lead to happy, independent readers.

Closing the Achievement Gap in the New Curriculum

Huw Duggan

The Minister for Education and Skills has acknowledged that high quality CPD for teachers and teaching assistants can break the link between educational attainment and poverty. Research is unequivocal that classroom level approaches shown to be particularly effective at raising the attainment of children living in low-income households combine: quality literacy/oracy teaching, positive learning environments, peer tutoring; formative assessment and feedback; structured group work/cooperative learning; and meta-cognitive strategies as well as high levels of teacher commitment and resilience.

This one-day practical programme, led by Huw Duggan (Former strategic advisor for closing the gap), will focus on 'why' and 'how' to close the achievement gap in the classroom.

This course will consider:

- The imperatives of high aspirations and challenging learning culture
- The impact of effective curriculum design, experiential and purpose-based learning.
- Assessment IN Learning as means to accelerate pupil progress
- How to structure effective collaborative learning
- What high quality peer assessment looks like
- Examples of metacognitive strategies that can build pupils' self-esteem and Independence.

This course is for teachers, senior leaders and head teachers. Whilst this course has a focus on classroom practice and pedagogy, it should be considered in the light of the schools wider focus to develop a strategic approach to closing the gap.

Date: Wed 5th June 2024

Audience: Teachers, Senior Leaders, Head Teachers

Using CAD to produce high quality products at PS2/3

Bob Cater & Nerys Tudor Jones

This exciting, hands-on course will explore the use of Computer Aided Design (CAD) at PS2 and PS3. This is a fundamental tool in engineering and product design.

The software used is free of charge and should be installed before attending the course. (Details will be sent to prospective attendees). Delegates will be instructed in the use of the software and will design and make a number of artefacts using a CAD process.

Aims of the course:

- to learn how to use CAD as a tool to support graphic and product design
- to learn how to use CAD to design and make a number of different products; such as bookmarks, nets, and gift bags
- to show the rich opportunities to link to other AoLE, including Mathematics and Numeracy and LLC
- to demonstrate how to effectively plan, teach and deliver CAD in real, relevant and meaningful contexts in designing and making to address many of the descriptions of learning for aspects of the Science and Technology AoLE.

Identifying ALN and interpreting behaviours

Angela Coates

According to the School census Wales 2023...

There were 10,485 pupils with Individual Development Plans under the new ALN system in maintained schools (16.6% of pupils with ALN or SEN), up from 3,330 (4.5%) at February 2022 <https://www.gov.wales/schools-census-results-headline-statistics-january-2023>

The requirement is clearly there –so how do we make sure we are addressing the needs of all our pupils?

Join us for a day of problem solving! We will discuss many behaviours and additional learning needs and how to effectively support pupils. This course will look at good practice in the mainstream classroom. You will learn about various strategies and ways to attune to your pupil's needs. You will have the opportunity to access observations made by specialist teaching. These will be presented as examples for you to take back to school and support pupils who may be struggling or identified as having ALN.

The course will cover:

- Awareness of various additional learning needs (including Oppositional Defiance Disorder and Pathological Demand Avoidance)
- Case studies
- Insights
- Interpreting behaviours
- Attuning to individual pupil needs
- Strategies/Targets for various Additional Learning Needs e.g. channelling behaviours.

Let's talk about Reasoning Lynwen Barnsley

This day will be an opportunity to think and talk about mathematical reasoning and its importance in the teaching and learning of mathematics.

We will be exploring:

- What we mean by reasoning and why we need to develop it;
- How to communicate our reasoning both orally and in written form;
- How to develop the language we need to communicate our reasoning;
- Ways to give learners the opportunity to reason in all maths lessons;
- How to improve reasoning skills;
- Practical ideas to be used in the classroom.

The course aims to give participants a clearer idea of what reasoning looks like in the classroom and some top tips for teaching it.

Assessment for Additional Learning Needs in the Mainstream Setting

Angela Coates

The Additional Learning Needs transformation programme came into practice on the 1st of September 2021. The idea was to create a unified approach for young people from the age of 0-25. An important part of this system is accurate and relevant assessment of Additional Learning Needs of pupils already identified as needing extra support. It is also important to develop screening systems within the mainstream setting in order to recognise needs in pupils that might not be presenting their additional learning needs in an obvious way in class. We will explore different Assessments and ensure that practitioners have a plethora of tools to assist in ascertaining the needs of all pupils.

The course will cover:

- Boxall profiling
- Coventry scales Grid
- Well being scales
- Readiness for learning scales
- Goodman's SDQ
- Differentiation in the mainstream class
- Sharing of good practice

Being a High Performing Teacher Huw Duggan

Most programmes focus on the practicalities of teaching. However very few look at the softer skills required to be a highly effective teacher in your classroom and your career. This course is for aspiring young teachers and those teachers that need to re-find their teaching mojo. Being a high performing teacher is based on the latest psychological research and publications to help teachers aspire to be more as well as supporting their emotional and mental wellbeing. Packed with practical activities, and models that will inspire and challenge teachers to develop better habits and be happier in work and life.

Course objectives:

- Effective goal setting in your work life and career
- Examining barriers and limiting beliefs that might hold you back.
- Understanding yourself and others to be more effective in the classroom
- Dealing with obstacles which inhibit high performance.
- Reframing setbacks as positives outcomes to be more high performing
- Getting balance right in your life to be highly effective

LIVE ONLINE: NEW Reinvigorate Reading: An Introduction to the 9 Reading Behaviours – A Whole School, Cross-curricular Programme to Teach and Develop Reading Comprehension (Morning 9am-12pm)
Stephanie Vaughan

A half-day online course to refresh the teaching of reading

To become effective readers pupils need to crack the phonic code and learn to make meaning independently. Pupils need explicit teaching to become effective readers and many daily opportunities to practise and apply their skills in live contexts. The 9 Reading Behaviours help pupils to learn what to do as they read. Initially, pupils learn each behaviour one-by-one, and overtime they learn to synthesise the behaviours, choosing the most useful strategies to unlock a text in any given context.

The 9 Reading Behaviours help pupils to solve problems as they read, engage with the text and to reflect on content.

Participating Schools have the option to purchase The Reading Behaviours pack at the discounted price of £365.75 (25% reduction), which contains 325 ideas and 175 bespoke resources to help busy teachers to provide engaging, stimulating and purposeful reading tasks.

LIVE ONLINE: Let's Crack the Spelling Conundrum Once and for All! (Morning 9.30am-12pm)
Helen Bowen

There is a national emphasis on pupil independence. This includes how well pupils can review and make changes to the accuracy of their written work, so spelling is a high priority that many of us are grappling with.

- What should our provision look like in order to have a broad and balanced approach that ensures that pupils develop a range of strategies to support spelling development and spelling beyond phonics?
- How can we actively teach a range of strategies to improve spelling in an interactive way that encourages independence and confidence as spellers?
- How can we weave spelling accuracy and editing into the writing process, so that improving writing becomes a process, not a one off post-draft event?

The main outcome of the half day session will be that a school has a clear strategic approach supported by a range of practical strategies and methods to enhance classroom practice and develop pupil independence.

Observation and Assessment in Early Years

Jen Summers

'WATCH, WAIT, WONDER ... making learning visible in Early Years'

This event focuses on capturing significant moments in children's play – noticing, analysing and responding. What really matters to young children? How can we effectively use observations to inform planning in a meaningful way? During the day we will spend time scrutinising the Welsh Government's new documentation relating to Early Years assessment – 'Assessment arrangements for funded non – maintained nursery settings'.

We will also explore a range of excellent systems for gathering and recording young children's development, interests and fascinations.

The course aims to:

- reflect on current observation systems and share a range of excellent material (including learning journals and floor books), which celebrate young children as creative, independent thinkers and learners with a positive disposition to learning
- draw attention to the role documentation plays in celebrating children's learning and the power of pupil voice in meaningful contexts

Please bring along anything that you have been using to support initial Early Years assessments to share with colleagues. (e.g. summative statements, observations, planning, learning journals etc.)

Mark Making to Writing – Focusing on the Progression from ‘Developmental Pathways’ to Progression Step 1

Jen Summers

Mark Making is integral to the process of creating confident and competent writers.

“Being able to assign meaning to marks is a creative endeavour that enables children to begin the journey of written communication, be that in drawings, writing or mathematical marks”

(A curriculum for funded non – maintained nursery settings p29)

The course aims to:

- explore the stages of mark making leading to letter formation within rich and meaningful contexts
- highlight drawing as a precursor to writing, storytelling and cognitive development indicator
- share specific characteristics of high-quality provision which appropriately facilitate and support children’s early writing in nursery and reception classes
- emphasise the importance of dance, music and rhyme in supporting fine/gross motor skill development

Outdoor Learning Classrooms

Jen Summers

What can I do with this concrete 'space'?

Introducing, organising, and managing an outdoor classroom can be extremely challenging, especially in schools where there is little access to suitable outdoor space. This event will focus specifically on areas adjacent to classrooms (the 'bit' outside the classroom) and will provide practitioners with the opportunity to refine and further develop current systems for organising and managing this interesting area.

The course aims to:

- discuss opportunities to create and further develop areas adjacent to classrooms so they provide meaningful and relevant learning experiences that link with the natural world
- share interesting 'outdoor classroom' case studies from a variety of schools across Wales and beyond
- provide opportunities to plan for specific high quality outdoor space/classroom provision

Delegates attending the training will have electronic access to a bank of adaptable and open-ended activity cards which can be used from Nursery to Year 2.

Date: Fri 28th June 2024

FREE STEM Training Day

Collective Learning are delighted to be working in partnership with STEM Learning Wales.

It means that we can run a day of workshops that are relevant to the professional needs of our teachers in Wales. We are able to offer schools a free STEM INSET day at the Future Inn on Monday 1st July. We can take whole schools if they have an inset day that day, but appreciate these may have already been allocated for this academic year.

However, we can also take some individual teachers. We have room for 150 staff in total!

The day will consist of 2 half day workshops chosen from the following:

- Techniquet - planetarium plus lab session
- Cath Delve - Maths in PS1/2
- Lynwen Barnsley - Measures and data handling in STEM
- Steph Vaughan - Non-fiction reading and writing in STEM
- Gareth Morgan - Databases and spreadsheets in STEM
- Nerys Tudor Jones - DT aspect
- Huw Duggan - Leading your AoLE

If you are interested in attending this please contact Karen Mills:
